The Ultimate Doodles Compendium Feb 27 2023 Before the inspired nonsense of Monty Python, David Letterman and the Far Side, there were Doodles. With a few squiggles in a simple square, these clever drawings created absurd scenes like "Ship arriving too late to save a drowning witch" (used by Frank Zappa as an album cover), "Octopus signaling for a left turn" and "Clam with buck teeth." And they were all the creation of one brilliant and unpredictable man: Roger Price. At the height of their popularity in the mid-1950s, fans enjoyed the Doodles TV show, a Doodles daily newspaper column, Doodles magazine features, Doodles cocktail napkins, even Doodles in ads for Lucky Strike cigarettes. Like hula hoops, drive-in movies and UFOs, Doodles were one of the biggest fads of the 1950s. Now Doodles make their triumphant return to delight a new generation that can use some laughs. The Ultimate Doodles Compendium includes every one of Roger Price's 352 most famous Doodles in delightful new full-quality reproductions, with Price's inspired text and quirky footnotes. There's more: a Roger Price/Doodles reminiscence by beloved media critic Leonard Maltin, a full history of Roger Price and Doodles by Emmy-winning writer Fritz Holznagel, and comments from comedy legend Carl Reiner, Boing Boing's Mark Frauenfelder and Carla Sinclair, and others. Doodles are back in this handsome, hilarious, ultimate collection from
